

WORD OF THE EDITOR

It is our pleasure that the European Project Management Journal has entered the 10th year of its existence.

This volume brings substantial changes in editorial policies and leads the journal towards distinguished indexing services.

The journal is now indexed in DOAJ (The Directory of Open Access Journals) and CEOL (Central and Eastern European Online Library).

Furthermore, the journal introduced an open access policy, and the authorship remains with the authors. Also, each published article is equipped with dates when it was received, revised, and accepted.

European Project Management Journal is a scientific journal and continues to bring the most current knowledge and best practice in the field of project management and other management disciplines.

Authors from more than 20 countries have recognized this journal as a vital reference in their academic or professional careers during its ten years of existence.

Most articles are based on original research undertaken by scholars and specialists in the field, and some are review articles. In addition to research articles, the Journal publishes commentaries, researches in brief, and book reviews.

Every submitted article undergoes double blind-review process ensuring high quality of the papers published. Editorial board and reviewer pool consist of most influential scholars and authors in project management worldwide.

Our genuine wish is to continue contributing to project management development and implementation in Europe and worldwide by publishing the latest achievements and research in the field.
